

which was suitably arranged to music: "Little Blue Bird," very sweetly and effectively. Miss Clendenen's voice is clear and sweet and true, and she uses it well without effort, which is a thing that adds greatly to the pleasure of listening. Mrs. Johnston sang "The Song of the Lark," very enthusiastically applauded. Her powerful voice filled the three rooms easily and the ringing rhythm of her selection showed it off very effectively. To that effect, which was thoroughly appreciated by the audience.

The rose fete was a beautiful milestone in our life. It was charity and fun to show once more what women will do for sweet charity's sake.

The wedding of Miss Ella Wiggin and Mr. Arthur Torrey Gomila took place last Monday evening at the home of the bride's parents in New Orleans. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Matthew Brewster, who, like the bride, was formerly a resident of Houston, in the presence of a goodly number of the friends and relatives of the bride and groom. There were but two bridesmaids—Miss May Pettit, sister of C. Gordon Bailey of San Antonio, the latter a lifelong friend of Mr. Gomila. The bride wore an exquisite gown of white organdie over white taffeta. The skirt was trimmed with a wide ribbon with a billowing of white gauze ribbon around the bottom of the deep flounce, and rows of the same frilling above the heading of the flounce. The fastenings were white silk with a billowing and puffs of the organdie, and the fact that the gown was a gift from her sister, Mrs. Pecay, added a pleasure to the bride in wearing it. She wore a long tulle veil, fastened with white roses and carried a handsome cluster of pink roses. The maid of honor was prettily gowned in white organdie over white satin and carried pink roses.

The occasion was very tastefully arranged and the ceremony over, the bridal couple led the way to the dining room, where the first toast was drunk by the bride, groom, and young people had gathered around a small table, upon which stood the bride's cake. It was covered with narrow white satin ribbons, one end of which was in the hands of the bride, the other hung loosely from the stand. Upon the ends of three of these ribbons the trophies were tied. When each had chosen a ribbon the signal was given to pull.

For an instant Miss May Pettit, the possessor of the ring, Miss May Pettit the dime, while Mr. Joe Wiggin doomed himself to bachelorhood by drawing the handle. For an instant the bride drew the cakes and toasts were ordered.

Mr. and Mrs. Gomila then appeared in travelling attire and bidding their friends adieu, left amid showers of rice and wishes, going to spend the honeymoon. Upon returning they will be at home at 6211 St. Charles avenue.

Mrs. Charles Peckham was in attendance from Houston. Mr. C. W. Craig, father of the poet, and R. M. Johnston, editor of The Post, and daughter, Miss Hallie Johnston, from Houston. There were no cards issued.

Robert E. Lee chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, held two meetings last week; one, the regular monthly meeting, on Monday and the other on Friday morning. At the former it was decided to celebrate the birthday of Hon. Jefferson Davis, the 3d of June, with an afternoon of music, readings and recitation. Mrs. B. A. Randall was made chairman of the committee in charge of the affair, with power to appoint her associates. Miss Dunavant was elected secretary and the study to be for

One of the daintiest and prettiest affairs of the week was the morning given by Mrs. David Rice, complimentary to Mrs. Algernon Smith of Fort Worth Friday afternoon. The ladies had each its cluster of apricot flowers. One had sweet peas, another Marguerites, and another bright golden cornpinks, and so on, and for each guest a silver pin to fasten on a cluster of the pretty blossom for a corsage bouquet. There were no prizes offered, but the glory of the coming out ahead on the twelve boards was sufficient to give keenness to the game. After they were seated at a luncheon we served on the table covered with the game. After they were seated at a luncheon we served on the table

Miss Lula Bryan's turn for entertaining the Monday Afternoon High Five club came last week, and she had a number of strangers with her to add to the afternoon's interest. Outside of the club were Mrs. Milton Brown of San Antonio, Mrs.
